WE

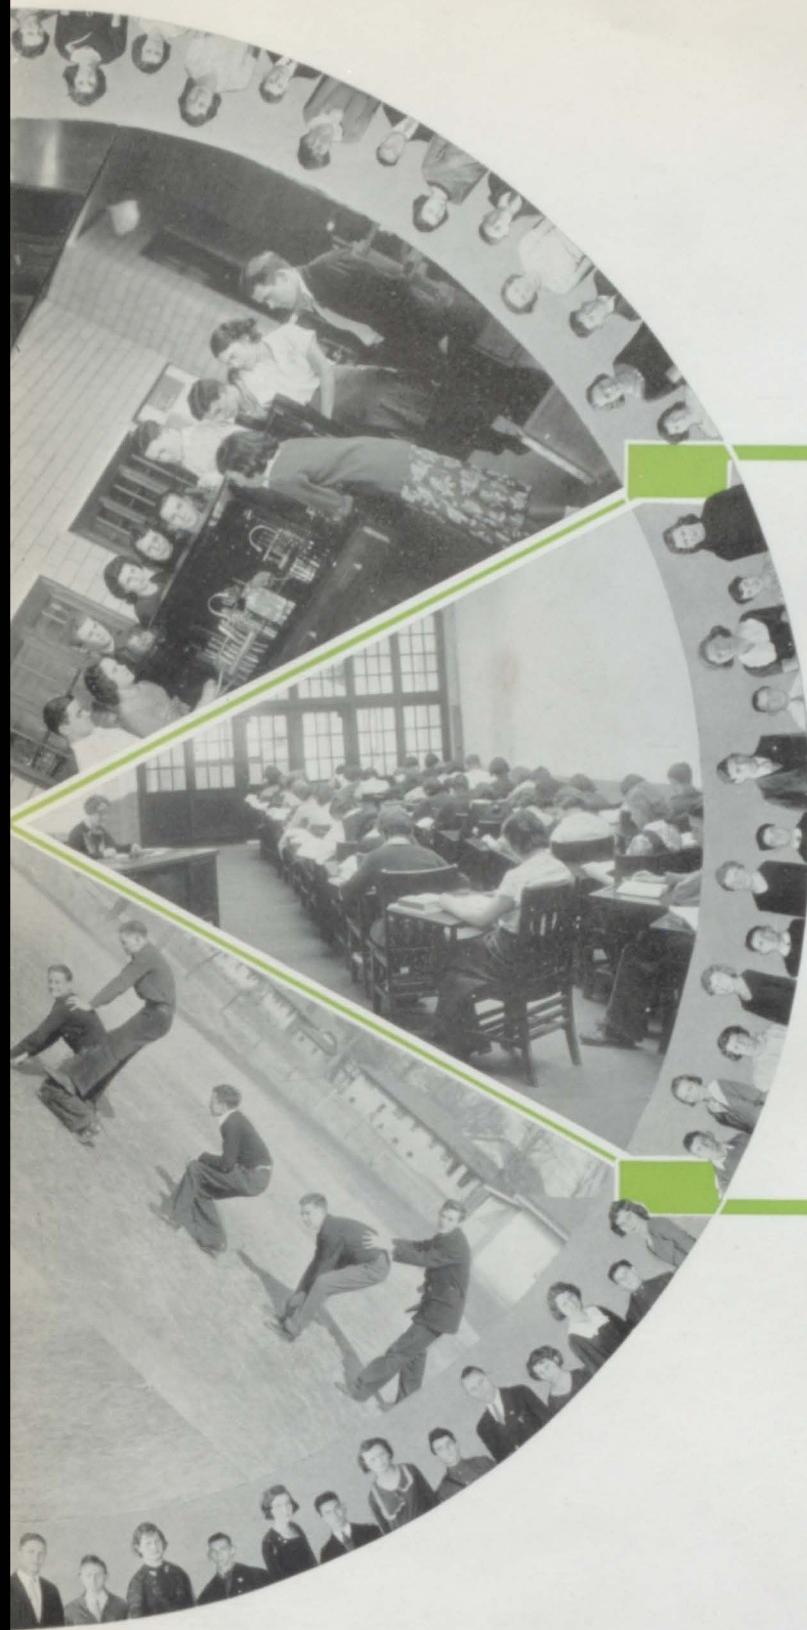

- TO THE QUILL AND BLADE
- EXPONENT OF THE
- WORK-STUDY-PLAY SCHOOL
- THAT IS SO HIGHLY
- ENDORSED BY THE
- 1934 SENIOR CLASS
- OF LEW WALLACE H. S.
- AT GARY, INDIANA

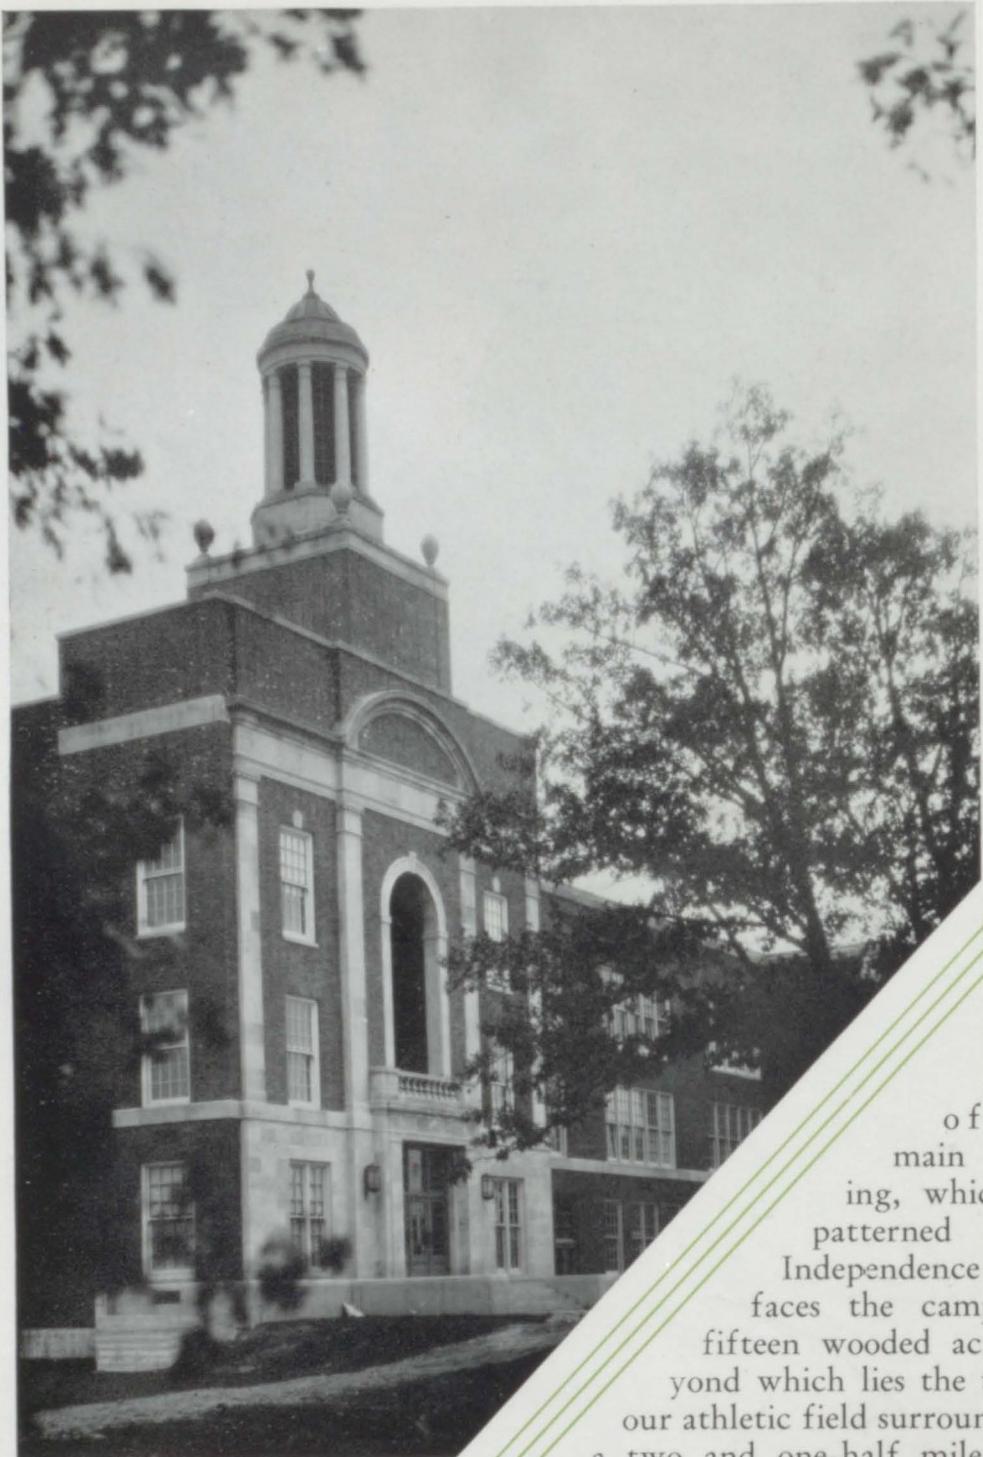

To William Wirt and Staff

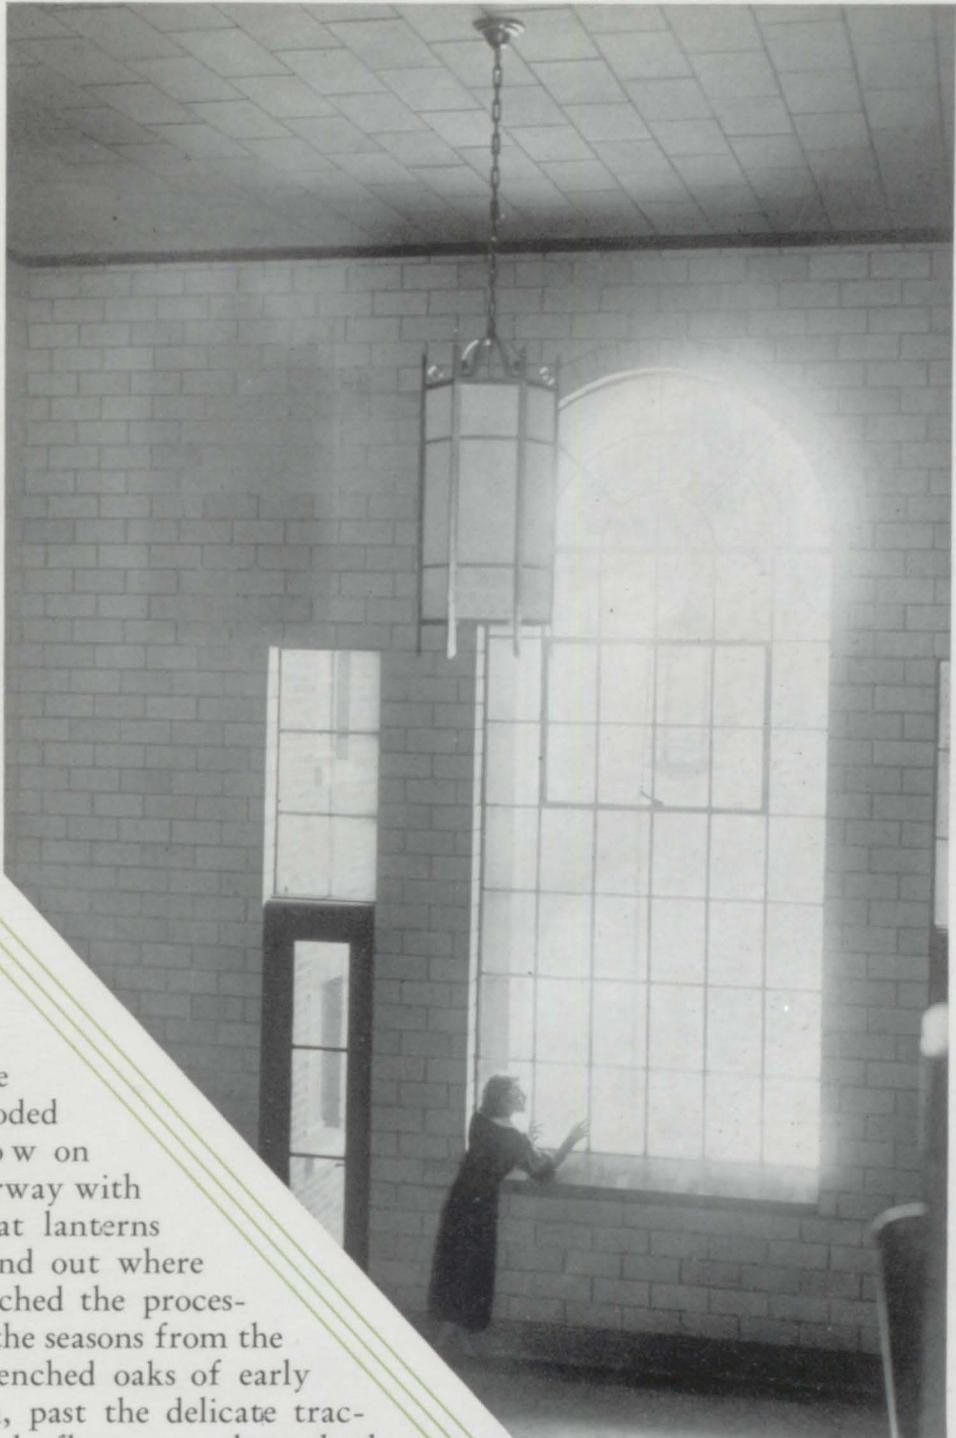

Through whose tireless efforts an educational plan has been created of which we are proud to be a part.

Work - Study - Play is a plan for the threefold development of the child which makes for the greater happiness and larger usefulness of the citizens of tomorrow.

This facade of our main building, which was patterned after Independence Hall,
faces the campus of fifteen wooded acres beyond which lies the turf of our athletic field surrounded by a two and one-half mile track.
The trees are the native growth and we strive to preserve here the rich
flora of the dunelands.

Here is the sun-flooded window on the stairway with the great lanterns
inside and out where we watched the procession of the seasons from the sun-drenched oaks of early autumn, past the delicate tracerries of leafless trees, through the grey-green loveliness of budding elms, to the rich fullness of early summer-- a collection of never-to-be-forgotten vistas.

In this medallion our student artist attempts to symbolize our school. The goddess of wisdom stands in the light of reason with the lamp of knowledge at her feet. The conventionalized thistle in the border is taken from the coat of arms of General Lew Wallace, soldier, scholar, statesman, whose name and heraldry we proudly bear.

SCHOOL

Mr. Combs, Mr. Seyl, Mr. Wirt, Mrs. Patterson

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION for the School City of Gary is tireless in its efforts to finance the projects, advance the interests, and safeguard the ideals of our Work-Study-Play schools.

By creating this type of school, Dr. William A. Wirt, our superintendent, has provided a school adapted to the artificial conditions under which children live in a modern industrial city and has made a lasting contribution to the field of education.

Peter W. Seyl, manager of the American Bridge Company, has served the community as president of the Board for the past five years. His keen insight, breadth of experience, and sympathetic understanding have made his services valuable to the school city.

Mrs. May A. Patterson, the secretary of the Board, is an active member of the community with diversified interests that bring her in close touch with local problems. Besides serving as president of the Gary League for Rehabilitation, which aids the handicapped either by finding work for them after they leave school or providing for their further education, she is associated with: The Dunes Federated Clubs, The Vivian Society, The League of Women Voters, and The Gary Civic Theater.

Leslie I. Combs, the third trustee on the Board, is completing his fifth year in the capacity of treasurer. Mr. Combs, who is one of Gary's pioneer business men and contractors, brings to the Board the experienced technique of the designer and builder which is of inestimable value in solving the problems of the physical upkeep of the school plants.

Mr. Combs has spared neither time nor energy in attaining and solving the peculiar financial problems presented by the economic stress of the past five years.

Remember the Senior Play?

SENIORS

The class of '34 was a loosely knit organization during its freshman year, but unity became apparent soon after the Thanksgiving dance. Many opportunities for social contact were offered that first year which prepared them to look forward zealously to the opening of the sophomore year.

The class held several general get-togethers as sophomores and class spirit became a reality. In the spring they arranged to meet one another under less formal conditions. A picnic was held at the Crown Point Fair Grounds, where male sponsors turned out tie-less and in shirt-sleeves and the women sponsors in old skirts and sweaters.

Since 1933 brought to Lew Wallace a wave of social organizations, juniors joined and began to take part in varied activities. With the Senior Honor Society acting as an incentive to excellent scholarship, many juniors attained high scholastic standings and were elected to membership; with the Inkpot Club serving as a stimulus, junior students gained recognition in the field of creative writing; and with the Sphinx and Vivi-Darians organized along purely social lines, other juniors found new social contacts in these groups.

As spring approached, the class of '34, cooperating with that of '33, began active preparations for the event of the year, the Junior-Senior "Prom". This all-important affair took place on May 27 in the Masonic Ballroom. Impressed by the successful and happy close of the junior year, the students awaited with enthusiasm the coming September.

At the opening of the senior year, the class of '34 plunged into the work of their last year with enthusiasm. Special subjects were now emphasized, and many seniors won honor and recognition in various departments of the school. Both this success and the many social events which culminated in the Senior "Prom" and commencement exercises marked this last year the fullest and richest period of their high school experience.

Regretfully the class of '34 sees the close of its high school days with a multitude of pleasant memories, recollections of difficulties overcome, and a knowledge of experience gained from its fruitful years, as the rich legacy that is ours.

The activities medallion shows a program enriched by opportunities offered in music, represented by the lyre; in art, by the palette and brush; in the theatre, by the mask; and in the field of creative writing, represented by the quill, books, and lamp of knowledge. The border on the top and bottom are the repeated emblems of Vividarian and Sphinx, our purely social organizations.

ACTIVITIES

BETTER CITIZENSHIP ORGANIZATION

The Better Citizenship Organization through the efforts of its sponsors and Howard Beasey, the president, has become a very important factor in the student life of the Lew Wallace School.

The officers of this administration were installed at a formal inaugural held in the new auditorium. The guest speakers were Robert Marks and George Sufana, president and Indiana governor of the National Association of Student Government Officers, of which Lew Wallace is a member.

This organization has forty councilmen, each the elected representative from a register class, two councilmen-at-large, and a President, Judge, and Clerk. The council is divided into six standing committees: Better Citizenship, Health and Hygiene, Safety, Publicity, Building and Grounds, and Scholarship and Attendance, each of which has a faculty adviser and co-chairman whose duties are to report the work of their respective committees to the council clerk, Olympia Muntean.

The School-Boy Patrol, a branch of the organization which is headed by the student captain, Thomas Doody, has a membership of forty. The monitor system, an outgrowth of the Patrol, was installed this year.

At meetings of the register classes, held each week, the councilmen have this year presented for general discussion, such topics of general interest as: school spirit, auditorium ideals, traffic problems, health and hygiene, and the constructive use of leisure time.

In addition this organization has sponsored the sending of letters to students absent from school for four days or more, taking care of bulletin boards and publicity material, giving safety talks in the auditorium, advising students through the judicial committee, compiling a scrap book of school activities, formulating a semester's report of tardiness, and taking care of outside and inside traffic.

The activities of the present Better Citizenship Organization will be a challenge for years to come.

MIXED CHORUS

AUDITORIUM

The auditorium is the center around which all school activities revolve. Here the best efforts of the individual and the choicest bits from the classroom are shared with student audiences to be developed, appreciated, and evaluated.

For eight years the program of each child includes a daily hour in auditorium which is divided between community singing, music appreciation, and a multitude of activities listed under "speech".

Here children learn the rudiments of parliamentary law by presiding over the activities of the group and reporting the minutes of the meetings.

The best in dramatic literature is presented; free dramatizations of numberless situations are developed, and interesting classroom work in academic and special subjects is offered. The idea is always to give enjoyment, develop appreciation, and stimulate the habit of critical observation to the end that only the best will be acceptable as entertainment and leisure hours will be spent profitably.

When the ninth grade is reached auditorium becomes an elective subject open to all high school students.

The auditorium further serves as the "hub of the school" by making it possible for all the registers of a given class to meet once a month during each semester so that class interests and activities may be discussed with the entire group instead of separate registers. This custom serves to unify classes and develop leadership.

Induction ceremonies for the Junior and Senior Honor Societies are held in the auditorium and are attended by all students of junior high school ranking and above. These are occasions for inviting some outstanding speaker from the community to address the student body and further cement the interests of the school and the community.

The inauguration of the officers of the Better Citizenship Organization is held annually in the auditorium before a capacity audience of parents, patrons, friends, and students whose enthusiasm attests to the value placed by the student body and community on the activities of this organization. General rallies and "pep meetings" are held here after the regular school sessions to promote the interests of seasonal sports and special activities.

At night the auditorium becomes the community theatre where weekly programs are offered by the students who here enjoy with their parents and friends the best work of individuals and groups, thereby sharing their gifts with a sympathetic and understanding audience and at the same time profiting from the opportunity offered by this audience situation. The community night entertainments usually include a motion picture program projected by some member of the Visual Educational Department.

The cross section of auditorium activities represented pictorially here reads from the top left to the bottom and across to the extreme right. First is a scene from Russia, dramatized by a history class with suggested properties and costumes in which the students shared interesting facts about Russia with the audience. Next comes a scene from Louisa May Alcott's "Little Women" followed by a glimpse of a comedy, "His First Dress Suit". The special program for Christmas, "The First Noel", combined music with the drama and here shows the adoration of the magi. A group from a Dutch program occupies the corner followed by the contestants in the declamatory and oratorical contests. Another special day program celebrating Thanksgiving shows "The Return of the Pilgrims"; below this is shown a class in speech.

Two classroom programs, one from the science laboratory demonstrating work on bones, and the other from mechanical drawing, are followed by a program from the commercial department showing student activities in the commercial field. The last group is a voice and diction class that elected to do intensive work for one semester on the interpretation of the printed page and the study of dramatic values and plays.

QUILL AND BLADE STAFF

Inspired by the favorable reception of the 1932 annual, the 1934 "Quill and Blade" staff undertook their task with a greater degree of confidence, hoping to make this publication of lasting value to the members of the senior class and the Lew Wallace School.

After weeks of serious consideration, the theme work-study-play was selected for the new edition because it is the nice balance between these three activities that is the foundation of the Gary Public School System.

Under the guidance of the faculty advisors, all the departments represented on the staff have endeavored to incorporate the theme into their work so that through this unity they might spin a thread strong enough to bind the book together. In retaining the same cover as the 1932 book, the "Quill and Blade" staff hopes it has established another tradition.

We Nominate

and Hope You Will Approve for the Lew Wallace Hall of Fame

Howard Beasey because he is the President of the Better Citizenship Organization and a former President of the Junior Republic.

William Berg because his music has been so generously shared with us, and the musical honors he has won have been so modestly accepted.

Mildred Hanson for her fine appreciation of and active interest in the projects of the girls' physical education department.

Marion Ublir because she carried local and state honors in bookkeeping and has unfailingly placed her talents at the disposal of the school.

Nick Latkovic because he has been twice a class president, piloting both the Sophomore and Junior classes.

Harold Murphy because in point of service he is the oldest of our councilmen.

Tom Doody because of his availability as a "starter" of projects.

Irene Tokash because of her unfailing spirit of cooperation and good-will.

Joyce Hansen because she can be depended on to produce a poem fit for the occasion.

Franklin Champion for his rapid rise in the military world.

Betty Quinn because of her success as an interpretive reader. State Poetry-reading Contest Winner—1933.

Emil Alcich as our outstanding cadet who maintains our faith in the value of military training.

Harold Zweig for his ability to sell roses, oranges, band tickets or "what have you?"

Charles Davis because he is an outstanding art student with a particular gift for portraiture.

Rudolph Carol because we appreciate that he is always a gentleman—quiet, courteous, dependable.

The department of physical education is represented by Mercury, the messenger of the gods with winged cap and sandals, bearing caduceus aloft, poised between the two great objectives character building and sportsmanship, and flanked on either side by leisure and health. The various games are represented as rays of light emanating from the aim of sportsmanship.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

The Physical Education program for the Lew Wallace School attempts a dual education of the individual. Besides stressing the necessity of developing a strong body and keeping it physically fit, emphasis is placed on character formation.

This department offers the opportunity for the students to relax and to enjoy types of exercise essential to health. It trains the students in body control which, in turn, develops both graceful and erect carriage. It stresses the fundamentals of good health, because happiness and success depend largely on the physical efficiency and alertness of the individual.

In intramural competitive games qualities of sportsmanship, fair-play, good citizenship, and co-operation are brought to the surface. These qualities which the student develops through game exercises will not only remain with him during his student days, but will carry over into later life and profoundly influence his social contacts.

The girls' department of physical education attempts, not a dual, but a threefold development. The social values received here are also outstanding in importance. Much time and instruction is given to social dancing. Some girls take no great pleasure in dancing, but every girl knows the importance of being able to dance well, and she knows, too, that her character and personality are often judged by her appearance and behavior on the dance floor. Not only dance-steps, but the etiquette and dress which conventions demand of the dancers is discussed in the class room.

There is also a swimming class which offers much in the way of opportunity for the moulding of character. A calm, cool, and alert response to a critical situation is often the result of good instruction in the pool. Since it is desirable that everyone should feel at home in the water and should know at least what to do when he finds himself in deep water, particular emphasis is placed on the fundamentals of swimming. This training teaches and develops the control of the body muscles, especially those of the diaphragm, which is an asset to speakers and singers as well.

An elective course in the department of physical education is the R. O. T. C., which was incorporated into the curriculum this year. Although it is fundamentally a military organization, it teaches the boy the responsibilities and privileges of citizenship and develops qualities of leadership useful in both military and civilian life.

An opportunity is here offered for the cultivation of tact, good judgment, discretion, and the ability to lead and command others. Military training through a system of promotion for merit encourages the boy to excel, and teaches him punctuality, precision, and cooperation. Constant inspection and attention to detail induces the cadet to take pride in his dress and personal conduct. Self-reliance, responsibility, and capability are by-products of this training. In addition to his drill and study of military requirements, each member accepts a social duty which tends to develop neatness, courtesy, and personality.

When the various units of this department are considered, it is obvious that the benefits derived are invaluable to the physical development and character formation of the members of the student body.

FOOTBALL

THE Lew Wallace 1933 football season proved to be the most successful in the history of the school. About sixty men answered the first call for practice early in the fall, and under the direction of Coach Baer worked out almost daily under the hot sun and the brisk autumn winds. The team came through an eight-game schedule with a record of five victories and three defeats.

In the opening game at Gleason Field against the "Brickies" of Hobart, Wallace encountered little opposition while running up a score of 40-6. The same was true the following week-end at Crown Point when the Hornets trounced the home team 19-6. But the next game with Roosevelt of East Chicago proved a real fight, and for the first time the gold and black emerged on the little end of the score. On successive week-ends thereafter Froebel and Hammond Tech fell before the vigorous attack of the Hornets, crucial victories both, since the former gave the local squad its first win of the city series and the latter clinched the "Little Three" championship. In the next game Whiting's "Oilers", one of the strongest teams of the state, proved a bit too powerful, and the result was a white-wash for Lew Wallace, but the team fully atoned for this a week later by their brilliant last-half victory over Horace Mann, 13-7.

On November 17, Wallace dropped the city championship to Emerson. But the fellows put up a game fight, and brought an altogether favorable season to a close.

BASKET BALL

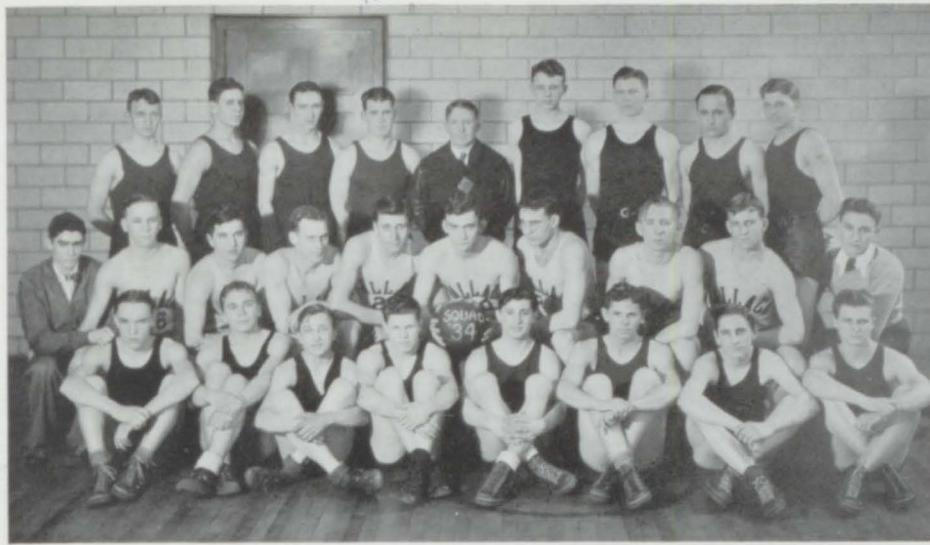

SCARCELY had the last touchdown been scored in football, when the season of the hardwood and the iron goal set in at Lew Wallace. The prospects were bright; for with three of last year's regulars returning and several promising reserves, the development of a winning squad seemed probable.

The Black and Gold was off to a slow start, winning only one of the first three games, but with each succeeding performance, the team showed steady improvement. When the time came for the annual holiday tournament, the Hornets were in the midst of a winning streak but encountered a disappointing defeat of 23-13 at the hands of Horace Mann in the semi-finals. In January Coach Richard Polk partially reorganized the first five, shifting Wilton Pfaff to center, Ed Pfaff and Eddie Ellch to forwards, and placing Nick Grubar and Willie Komenick at guard positions. The new combination came through with four straight victories from Hobart, Michigan City, Emerson, and Roosevelt before losing in a triple overtime game to Horace Mann in the last scheduled contest of the year.

On March 1 Lew Wallace opened the Gary Sectional against Clark of Hammond and encountered little difficulty in gaining a 33-20 victory. In the second game with Whiting, however, the Oilers proved too strong and Wallace succumbed, 22-13.

The season closed with a total record of eleven victories and eight defeats. Several members of the squad will be graduated in June, but a great many will return, and we shall look forward to a longer and more successful basket ball season in 1934-35.

GIRLS' ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

THE Lew Wallace Girl's Athletic Association, under the supervision of Miss Isabelle Brown of the physical education department, has had an extremely active year. Not only has there been a marked increase in social activities, but swimming has been added to the sport curriculum.

At the beginning of the first semester the sale of taffy apples proved a very successful method of raising funds for a depleted treasury. This effort was followed by a joint matinee dance and candy sale. At Christmas time a successful dance, with all of the holiday spirit and fun, was sponsored. The next event on the social calendar was a Valentine dance, at which a host of young people danced in the gymnasium, which was decorated with numerous red hearts. Approaching spring and warm days brought a longing for the out-of-doors; so donning tramping togs, the club hiked to Marquette Park by the old river trail.

On May 27th, the fourth annual banquet was held in the cafeteria, and guest speakers added zest to the banquet dinner. At this time awards were presented to girls meritizing them, through the accumulation of points.

Five hundred points entitles one to a Girls' Athletic Association pin; one thousand, an emblem, and to each girl earning two thousand points is given the privilege of wearing a sweater. These points are earned in the following manner: One hundred points are given to each girl chosen for a team. Twenty-five additional points are given to girls selected for varsity teams. Fifty points are given to each girl who hikes forty miles. Girls who are chosen for varsity teams on the basis of outstanding ability and excellent sportsmanship cherish this honor.

The Girls' Athletic Association is organized primarily to promote sportsmanship and enthusiasm among girls who are interested in athletics as an extra-curricular activity.

PRAYER

God, help our class of '34
To brave the coming years
With shoulders squared, and evermore
Fight off the jealous fears
That crumble shining cities down
And trade tin jewels for a crown.

God, lead our class of '34
Along the shadowed ways,
But let our pulsing spirits soar
Too, with the happier days,
And all along the paths of life
Smile at hardships, bear the strife.

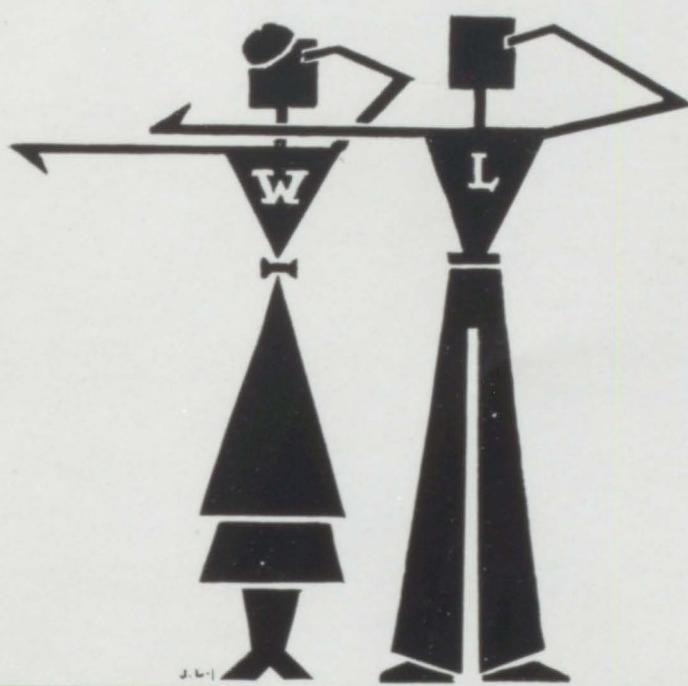

God, touch the class of '34
With graciousness and peace,
And thrill their souls forevermore
With freedom's sweet release—
Release that lifts above the clod,
Yet shield us with the hand of God.

God, hold the class of '34
Within Thy loving sight
And bring us safely to the shore
Led by Thy holy light,
And when we're softly laid to rest
Grant, God, that we may pass the test.
